George David PérezVélez

One of Puerto Rico's most gracious gifts to the East Bay LGBTQ community is an island native son, George David PérezVélez, born in Santurce, PR, in November 1964. He and his husband, Thomas, have been together for 23 years, the last 15 of which have found them living very full lives from their home in the North Berkeley hills.

George was the "middle child" - between two sisters - born to a hard-working self-made restaurant-owner and his wife. The three kids were raised as Catholics, with George baptized and confirmed by the Marianists (Society of Mary).

"My Dad - who was orphaned as a child, only had a third-grade education and could barely sign his own name - was the most moral and ethical person I've ever known in my life," George recalls wistfully. "He taught me my work ethic, showed me by example how to be open and caring with all different people and was one of the most generous human beings in the world."

As a child, George saw his father working hard, running two restaurants from 5am until 11pm six days a week. On Sundays, George would accompany him to the seafood, meat and vegetable markets, adhering to the healthy "farm-to-table" model many years before it became vogue on the mainland.

"Equally important to me was how he modeled treatment of 'others' in his world," George says. "There were prostitutes, homeless, transgendered, down-and-out, sometimes mentally-impaired or drug-addicted people of all ages on the streets outside his restaurants. Instead of judging any of them, he offered them free food and treated them with the utmost respect. That lesson has stayed emblazoned between these two ears and in this heart - as a gay man, it was an invaluable lesson! We all deserve respect!"

George's relationship with his mother was a bit more complicated.

"I felt like Mom doted on the girls and paid very little positive attention to me," George recalls, "although she did take us to Europe as kids and did teach us some important life lessons, as well. When I was 10 or 12, for instance, she forced me to fight with an older kid who had been bullying me. She did stop the fight after we'd each got in a few good punches. But the lesson that I took away from that experience was that we should never live in fear. And I don't!"

One of their mother-son disagreements, however, degenerated into a very dramatic scene.

"In the course of our argument, I exchanged disrespectful words with her. After she smacked me a good one, I escaped to my private bedroom hideaway!" George explains. "We had a stand-off for several hours - her insisting I should come out, me refusing - at which time she warned me she would burn down the door to my room if I didn't come out. And she DID! Even years later, she never replaced that door, the moral being 'never dis-respect your parents' and "words and actions have consequences", another life lesson that has stayed with me."

As for her attitude toward his gayness, the only conversation George recalls having with her on the subject occurred when she came with his sisters from Tennessee to visit with him and Thomas at their home in Atlanta.

"All she ever said was that she was aware I had a boyfriend and she made no particular comments about that," he says. "Her last word on the subject, however, was 'but I don't want you to be wearing any wigs and dresses' - which I can say that I've never done, largely because of her request, although I never have and never will have any judgment about anyone who does drag or is transgender and finding their truth'.

Though he dated girls in high school, he was never seriously involved in a long-term relationship with any of them.

"I think those friendships taught me more about dealing with and appreciating women than my family life did," George recalls. "I feel blessed to have so many amazing women in my life, who have mentored me, respected me for my choices, as I've respected them for theirs."

After graduating from high school in 1983 at age 18, George left Puerto Rico for Clark University in Worcester, MA, where he received a B.A. in Political Science. He also attended Boston University for two years. In addition, he subsequently earned a Culinary Arts degree from Johnson and Wales in Charleston, SC.

"It was my experience coming out in the gay scene and the ACT UP movement in the Boston area that inspired me to become a political activist, particularly around police misconduct," George reminisces. "In those days, the BPD routinely harassed, arrested and jailed LGBTQ folks via the bar and street scene. If you were a hooker and would put out for them, they'd leave you alone; but if not, you were fair game for not only harassment, but police brutality."

When George finished college, he joined the Navy, where he served aboard the Submarine Fleet in South Carolina. Because of "Don't Ask, Don't Tell", he remained closeted during those years in the military. He earned a Veteran's designation and was honorably discharged in 1993.

After leaving the military, George went with a friend to Atlanta, where the city was preparing for the 1996 Olympics. Soon after that move, he met Thomas, the man who was to become his domestic partner for 14+ years and then husband for over eight years at this point.

"It was after Christmas in 1993, when I first laid eyes on him," George recalls. "When I saw this gorgeous 6'2" blond blue-eyed tanned muscular guy in a tank-top, I said to my friend, 'You know what, I'm going to meet him!' But of course, I was too scared to follow up on that brazen prediction. A few days later, at a New Year's Eve party, the same beautiful man walked in, eventually walked over to me and said, 'Hey, you're very good looking!' which we ex-military guys were not used to responding to. So I just said 'thanks'. We exchanged phone numbers, he called me two days later, we had our first date on January 7th, 1994 - I remember exactly what he was wearing: blue jeans and a green plaid long sleeve shirt - and we've been together ever since!"

Thomas was raised in South Dakota, the only child of his mother and father, who were both up in years by the time he came along. His father died when Thomas was still a toddler, so his mother raised him essentially by herself. Like George's father, she made many sacrifices to ensure that Thomas had everything he needed to get a good education. He has an engineering degree from South Dakota State University, a Master's in Hydrology from Purdue and a Master's in Business from Emory University.

"By the time I met Thomas, his mother had been diagnosed with Alzheimer's and was failing very quickly," George recalls. "He moved her to Atlanta, so he could take of her, as she had taken care of him. When I saw her the first time, she was wearing a pantsuit and smoking a cigarette. We never truly had a long conversation. I think her strict Lutheran background made her resist approving of our relationship, but I don't know that for sure. I do know that she was never unkind and never expressed negativity to Tom. She loved him for who and what he was."
After Thomas's mother died, he told George that it was time to leave Atlanta. They had difficulty with the politics of places like nearby Forsyth County, where blacks, Latinos and gays faced unwelcoming and threatening billboards, policies and violence. They felt they would never be able to come out personally or professionally in Georgia. So in 2002, the couple sold their house and headed to California, where Thomas had been offered a job with a water conservation non-profit in Sacramento.

"We were not very happy in Sacramento, so we only stayed one year," George explains. "I found that - in spite of all of my culinary credentials - I could not get a job there, primarily because of my Latino surname. Thankfully, I finally got a job offer at a high-end restaurant in Palo Alto - thanks to a hotel general manager who knew me from Atlanta. So we finally wound up in the Bay area, where we belonged!"

After an extensive search, they wound up with a home in the North Berkeley hills, where they live to this day. Since arriving here, both men have been very active politically and on commissions. Thomas is a past member and Chair of the Berkeley Public Works Commission and a former union E-board member while he worked at EBMUD. He is now the Water Resources Manager at BAWSCA (Bay Area Water Supply and Conservation Agency). George is a current member and founding Chair of the BART Police Oversight Agency (BART Police Citizens Review Board); current longest-serving member, past Vice-Chair and Chair of the Berkeley Police Review Commission and a past member of the Berkeley Commission on Labor.

"One of my two proudest accomplishments was helping with Out4Immigration.com," George states. "After the Supreme Court ruling on same-sex marriage, watching LGBT folks being able to stay TOGETHER after years of being forced to live apart - has been balm for my soul".

The other achievement was his advocacy in implementing Police General Orders on the treatment of Transgender individuals at BART, San Francisco and Berkeley.

"I know my Dad - who inspired me so profoundly as a kid to love everyone- is celebrating with us from his celestial perch somewhere!"

George attended the State Democratic Convention in Sacramento the third weekend in May as a Nancy Skinner delegate for the 9th Senate district, as well as an Alameda County Central Committee Associate Member for the 15th district. His political credentials at this point read like a California Democratic "Who's Who". An Executive Board member of the East Bay Stonewall Democratic Club (and former Chair of its Policy and Advocacy Subcommittee), he's also a member of the Berkeley Democratic Club, the Wellstone Democratic Renewal Club and the El Cerrito Democratic Club. In addition, he's a member of the following California Democratic Party caucuses: Chicano/Latino, Environmental, LGBT, Progressive and Veteran's. And finally, he's a member of the Bay Area Chapter of ACLU Northern California, the Sierra Club, National Council of La Raza and the NAACP.
"Yes, I've been thinking about running for political office again at some point," George admits. "Since that happy day when Thomas and I were finally married in 2008 - right before the controversial Prop 8 passed - I've had my eye on making a political difference locally."

George ran for the Rent Board in Berkeley in 2010, and although he did not win, he garnered close to 10 thousand votes and great endorsements from 6 out of the 9 Berkeley City Council members and the Alameda County Central Committee.

"There's no reason why so many myths about LGBT individuals should be perpetuated. There was a time when gay men were afraid to even baby-sit other people's kids for fear of being labeled child molesters. I am glad that in the Bay Area and California there are different perspectives and everyone is respected regardless of gender identity, religion, nationality or sexual orientation. We need to start at the local level, continuing to change minds and hearts, so that we can then succeed at the regional, state, national and international levels and make the world a safer place for everyone. The Berkeley City Council would be a great platform for my Democratic and Progressive ideals. Thank you, Larry Kramer, for getting me started!"

For those who might be unaware, there's only been one Latino Governor of California since it was admitted into the Union: one Romualdo Pacheco, the 12th Governor for ten months in 1875, which is 142 years ago. It wouldn't come as a great surprise to see George PérezVélez follow in Governor Pacheco's footsteps one day - probably for much longer than ten months, however! And, just think, the Governor's Mansion would be occupied by the Governor and his "First Gentleman"!

Good luck, George! And thank you for your military, political, personal and professional service to the community at large, as well as to the LGBTQ community, specifically!

Book Review:

The Rainbow Comes And Goes: A Mother And Son on Life, Love and Loss

By Anderson Cooper and Gloria Vanderbilt

Anderson Cooper is, of course, well-known for his program on CNN and frequent appearances on "60 Minutes". The equally-famous Gloria Vanderbilt, American artist, author, actress, fashion designer, heiress, and socialite, is his mother. She is a hearty 92 years of age. She is the only member of his family left. His father died in 1978 and his brother committed suicide in 1988.

The chapters alternate between Anderson and Gloria.

The family income was limited and supervised by the state. His father spent it all.

Gloria knew Anderson was gay and seemed to accept it. He felt that he lacked role models.
He was both Catholic and Episcopal. He once had tea with Cardinal Spellman. He now considers himself an agnostic.

His first visit to Hollywood was graced by socializing with Constance Bennett and Gilbert Roland. He had dinner with Marlene Dietrich.

I have mixed feelings about Anderson's accounts. Fans will be disappointed. Anderson fails to tell us about his life partner. There is too much about Gloria and her son and how they felt about each other. "Rainbow" is too subjective and personal. Anderson should write another book. Let's hear about his real emotions.

CALL FOR VOLUNTEERS

Lavender Seniors currently seeks volunteers for two areas of work within our organization: the Advisory Board and Program Coordination.

Have you benefited from Lavender Seniors work during its 20+ years of history? Do you have energy, dedication, and skills to give back and make a rewarding difference in your own life and that of other Bay Area seniors? If so, consider becoming an Advisory Board Member.

The group meets monthly in San Leandro and at this time needs to replace some interim members with longer-term ones to meet its quorum requirement.

Also, presently, Lavender Seniors is served by an Interim Program Coordinator. The group needs someone part-time who will support the growth of the vision, mission, and values of the organization while developing and implementing a strategic plan to accomplish its long-term and day-to-day operational needs. Tasks would include administration, organizing activities, and the pursuit of funding opportunities.

If either of these areas sound good to you, please contact beckie@lavenderseniors.org and one of the current Board members will be in touch with you soon. Thank You!

LAVENDER SENIORS FRIENDLY VISITOR PROGRAM HAS VOLUNTEER OPPORTUNITIES AVAILABLE.

Volunteers with the Lavender Seniors Friendly Visitor program are background checked and interviewed after which they are matched with a senior to visit once a week for a couple hours each week. Visitors can share stories, chat about mutual interests and current events, and if both are willing and able, volunteers can take their seniors out for a walk in the park, a bite to eat, a cup of coffee, or maybe a movie or a trip to the museum. We ask volunteers to make a commitment of at least six months. If you are interested in joining our program, please contact the program coordinator, Linda Hoyne at LIFE ElderCare 510-574-2097.

There is a current list of men and women from San Pablo to Fremont waiting Friendly Visitor volunteers.

If you are a senior who feels isolated in their home and would like a visitor, you may contact L. Hoyne as well.

Review of Celeste Newbrough's "The Angel of Polk Street"
By Stephanie Ann Blythe

Celeste Newbrough weaves together two stories in "The Angel of Polk Street." One is a narrative tale of survival, redemption and transformation, and the other is a dialogue between the protagonist, Lee/Leslie, and her angel. Several contemporary themes regarding gender identity are explored in the story as well.

The "nature versus nurture" argument about homosexuality and/or transsexuality is taken to the extreme when dealing with the captivity and abuse that Lee suffers. This reviewer has seen how two different transgender people have responded to childhood sexual abuse. We may not find the answer in "The Angel of Polk Street," but the theme is intelligently explored.

In a time when gender transitions become tawdry spectacles on cable channels, Newbrough thoughtfully takes the reader through Lee's transition into Leslie. The grudging acceptance by her mother, contrasted with her father's hostile stance, mirrors the experience of many transgendered persons and their families. The tension is heightened by the difficulties of a family attempting to reunite years after being suddenly torn apart.

Leslie finds a stabilizing influence in her life through a relationship with Hanai, an intersexed person, who is also exploring self-identity. If I have one point of contention with "The Angel of Polk Street," it is the way intersexuality is treated and discussed. I found Hanai's character to be very believable, but I found Newbrough to be a bit loose in how she describes intersexuality. To be sure, if transsexuality is not well understood by the public, intersexuality is even less understood. The author actually plays on that by having Leslie's father call her intersexed because she has not yet had gender reassignment surgery.

I am very drawn by the angel in the dialogue with Lee/Leslie. In my mind, I see the angels who appeared in "The Laramie Project" and the angels at the funeral of Gwen Araujo who shielded her family from the goons of the Westboro Baptist Church. But the angel here appears from without, but it is really the angel within. It is the voice within responding to our questions of who we are. Indeed, the artist cannot see and cannot draw the wings that Leslie knows she has.
"The Angel of Polk Street" is an enjoyable and compelling read. It asks many questions and sometimes answers questions with more questions. Read it, and then look around you. How many angels (with or without wings) do you see?

Lavender-Tinted Glasses:
A Groovy Gay Look at the Summer of Love

All of them brought their perspectives as artists, visionaries, and sexual outsiders to the uprisng; all made a lasting impact on American culture. In addition, the exhibition documents how the city's homophile community responded to the Summer of Love. The show will include historic photographs, ephemera, and artifacts from the GLBT Historical Society and private collections.

"In San Francisco's Haight Ashbury district, young people were seeking a way out of what they saw as the soul-destroying alienation of materialism," curator Joey Cain says. "They created new art, philosophies, politics, forms of self-expansion, music and relationships. The city already had a dynamic LGBTQ community, and many members saw the developments of the Summer of Love as opening the way to greater liberation."

Lavender Seniors Film Series, Wednesday, June 21st, 1-3pm

A Perfect Ending

This month’s Lavender Seniors Film presentation, "A Perfect Ending", is an award-winning 2012 film involving a high-priced lesbian escort/call-girl and a woman in an unhappy marriage, who has recently received some disconcerting medical news.

The movie immediately introduces the two main protagonists. Paris (Jessica Clark) is a young, dark-haired woman who works as a high-priced escort/call-girl, but is a creative artist by nature. Rebecca (Barbara Niven) is a rich, blond, straight, middle-aged wife.

Rebecca has lived a wealthy, privileged existence in creating a perfect family with her husband Mason Westridge (John Heard). The only signs of troubles are their hostility towards each other and conflicting opinions about whether Jessica, Rebecca's only daughter who has a different father, should receive equal stock shares of the family business as her two half-brothers. It is implied that Mason had previously attempted to sexually assault his step-daughter.

Rebecca feels an emotional emptiness and confides in her two lesbian best friends that she has never hit the peak of sexual climax, and that she and Mason only have sex once or twice a year, which is fine with her. One of her friends suggests that Rebecca try a very discreet escort service run by her own cousin (Morgan Fairchild).

It is then that Rebecca meets Paris and through a series of very discreet meetings, Rebecca eventually warms up to Paris’ gentle advances and achieves her goals of having sex with another woman, and experiencing true happiness and satisfaction for the first time in her life.

We learn that Paris, who is well appreciated for her services, seems to be in agony over a past mistake that had led her to this profession. It is implied that Paris’ husband died after being hit by a car shortly after their wedding day. It is Rebecca who later helps Paris to let go of her past and heal.
This is a very dramatic, extremely erotic and emotional "two-hanky" film, which covers a lot of ground vis-à-vis family dynamics, sexuality, wealth and realizing unrequited dreams. It has received many rave reviews, including the following:

"Sizzling, romantic drama." - SheWired.com

"A fresh, empowering chic flick that starts out with natural humor and evolves into an erotic journey... Yes, there is lot of sex, but it didn't feel gratuitous. It felt natural, a tough accomplishment for a film about essentially one woman's affair with a call girl." - TAGG Magazine

"(Features) a bold, beautiful, unleashed performance by Niven and a star turn from drop dead gorgeous Clark." - Frameline, San Francisco LGBT Film Festival

"Conn's film upends traditional prejudices regarding a woman's age, beauty and sexuality through depicting tender and joyous lovemaking." - BeyondChron.com

"Raw, moving, and often humorous." - OUTFEST, Los Angeles LGBT Film Festival

"The performances of Clark and Niven add so much depth and humanity, pain and bliss." - My LGBT Plus

"Hugely entertaining... and it's HOT. The leads have fantastic chemistry." - Birds on the Blog.com

"A strong supporting cast and astonishing performances by the film's central leads will enthrall audiences." - Philadelphia Q Fest

The film will be shown at 1pm on Wednesday, 21st of June, in the Lecture Hall of the San Leandro Public Library, 300 Estudillo, a ten-minute walk up Estudillo from the San Leandro BART station - or a five-minute walk from the AC-Transit stop at E. 14th and Estudillo.

Lavender Seniors will provide popcorn, bottled water, Martinelli's apple juice, plus miniature Reese's peanut butter cups. After the showing, there will be a brief discussion and evaluation of the film and the issues it brings up for LGBTQ Seniors and their allies.

For people who are driving, the library is on Estudillo two blocks below Bancroft Avenue in San Leandro. It is accessible via either I-880 or I-580, as well.
From I-880, get off at the Davis exit and head east toward the hills. Davis eventually becomes Callan, which passes the north side of the library two blocks above East 14th.

Coming on I-580, get off at the Estudillo Exit (#31B) and follow that street down toward the Bay until you reach 300 Estudillo.

There is ample free parking - some three-hour and some two-hour - at the library.

Lavender Seniors to Co-Present "Lavender Scare"

The Frameline International LGBT Film Festival in San Francisco has requested that Lavender Seniors co-present a film in the
"The Lavender Scare" is a documentary about what happened after President Dwight D. Eisenhower's 1953 Executive Order banning LGBT people from any government posts (intact and enforced until Clinton reversed it in 1995)! The threat is still there, of course, for it to be reinstated under the current "non-administration" #45. Those of us who lived through this in the 1950s may see it recur 60+ years later!

The Lavender Scare is the first documentary film to tell the little-known story of an unrelenting campaign by the federal government to identify and fire all employees suspected of being homosexual.

In 1953, President Eisenhower declared gay men and lesbians to be a threat to the security of the country and therefore unfit for government service.

In doing so, he triggered the longest witch hunt in American history.

Over the next four decades, tens of thousands of government workers would lose their jobs for no reason other than their sexual orientation.

The actions of the government had an unintended effect. They inadvertently helped ignite the gay rights movement.

In 1957, after thousands had lost their jobs, a Harvard-trained astronomer named Frank Kameny became the first person to fight his dismissal. His attempts to regain his job evolved into a lifelong fight for the rights of LGBT people.

The Lavender Scare is a compelling story of one man's fight for justice. And it is a chilling reminder of how easy it can be, during a time of fear and uncertainty, to trample the rights of an entire class of people in the name of patriotism and national security.

Recipes of My Heritage

Many of our Lavender Seniors come from very rich culinary backgrounds that are not usually carried forward as part of their stories. As a consequence our LGBTQ community loses an important part of its cultural heritage.

From time to time we will publish recipes from the kitchens of LGBTQ individuals in order to share and carried forward a heritage that would hopefully enrich the generations that follow.

If you wish to share recipes from your kitchen, send the recipes with a little history, to B.Jue.Lavendersenior@gmail.com. We will try to publish them as we can.
