We lost a sweet wonderful woman...way too early! Wife, Mother, Grandmother, Sister, Daughter, Friend.

Ary Elizabeth Goldberg
02/15/1955 to 11/7/2018

Our hearts and hugs go out to D’Anne Bruetsch who lost her wife, Ary, in November. They were married just a few days shy of 2 years, their love brought sunshine into any room they entered.

D’Anne has volunteered with Lavender Seniors as a Friendly Visitor, a group facilitator and on the Board of Directors. She was featured in one of the eight Lavender Scrolls developed by Lavender Seniors in 2006-07. You can read her story in the Stories of our Lives section in the October 2018 Lavender Notes.

D’Anne & Ary on their honeymoon cruise, November 2016
Mark Schwartz

Participants, volunteers, clients and friends of Lavender Seniors of the East Bay come from all walks of life, parts of the world, races, religions, nationalities and political persuasions. Few, if any, of us fit neatly onto a specific point on the Kinsey 0-6 scale, various definitions of LGBTQ+, socio-economic “brackets”, definitive locations along the radical-conservative spectrum, the IQ continuum or even the amorphous/polar “happy-sad” and “glass-half-full vs. glass-half-empty” self-identities.

Mark Schwartz, featured this month in this “Stories of Our Lives” column, has hop-scotched liberally through and skittering around many of these categories over the years.

Born in the Bronx, NY, June 1st 1954, Mark was the third of five children – two older sisters, one older brother and one younger brother – born to an urban housewife and her husband, a TV repairman, fruit and vegetable wholesaler and strong Teamster Union member. Mark’s early exposure to labor union culture made him a life-long advocate for Unions.

“My Dad played an important role in my life,” Mark recalls, “introducing me to baseball, to the plight of working people and the principle that if you treat your workers well, they’ll treat you well in return. I’ve been a regular contributor to Labor Fest in San Francisco for the decades since I’ve been on the West Coast.”

He credits his mother, however, for many of the academic and professional achievements he’s made in his life on both coasts after graduating from DeWitt Clinton High School in 1971.

“My Mom always went to my schools, met with my teachers and generally promoted my education,” he recollects. “Her encouragement was the main reason I wound up getting into Cornell University in Ithaca, NY, where I studied Industrial Engineering and Operations Research. I also focused considerably on game theory, probability and manpower studies.”

His parents divorced when he was in high school. His father later married a woman who owned several clothing shops. His mother dated his high school baseball coach.

“Though I had a pretty good time with the other students, my high school years were pretty boring and focused on education,” Mark says. “Though I never really thought much about sex in those days, I was fairly convinced at an early age that I was probably gay. After a girl tore a loop off the back of my shirt and announced to the world that she’d removed my ‘fag tag,’ I became intent on developing some kind of agreeable relationship with a girl. I was pretty out of the dating stream, however, given that the one girl I was interested in – somebody I walked home regularly – turned me down when I suggested we go to a basketball game, probably not the most exciting proposal she’d ever had.”

While Mark was at Cornell, he began to become politically active. He was one of the co-founders of CUGALA (Cornell University Gay and Lesbian Association). He rarely saw his parents or siblings during those college years.

“I could generally count on my father showing up with his second wife periodically, taking me out to lunch and giving me $500 or so each semester,” Mark recalls. “But I don’t think either of my parents was very interested in what I was doing by then. Meanwhile, I was trying to learn how to figure out staffing patterns, like how many doctors, nurses and orderlies does it take to run an efficient nursing home.”

He never discussed his gayness with his parents. It was only after Harvey Milk’s assassination in November 1978 that he came out to his sister, Sally.

“She never really acknowledged that conversation, though she didn’t seem to care one way or another,” Mark asserts. “With my mother, when a gay friend came to dinner, she said she didn’t want him to come into the house. I also don’t know if my brothers know about me – my older brother and I haven’t kept in contact and my younger brother has also fallen off the radar. I wish we were better-connected, but I really don’t think that’s ever going to happen now.”

After graduation from Cornell, Mark spent a few years honing his manpower-planning skills with the FAA (Federal Aviation Administration) in Washington, DC.

“We studied traffic patterns around airports, trying to optimize, for instance, the numbers of police officers to monitor airport perimeters,” he recalls. “At that point, there was a growing fear of hijacking, which meant monitoring gates and other access points with the fewest number of officers to maximize security at the lowest cost. For one of the international airports, eight of our twelve recommendations were accepted by the airport police, saving an estimated $400,000 per year without reducing the security level.”

Mark moved to a job with Union Carbide in Needham, Massachusetts, a decision he soon regretted, though they offered a higher salary, a car and an expense account.

“I left the FAA because I became ‘starry-eyed,’ thinking I could make more money and have more excitement,” he recalls. “Commuting from my Putnam Avenue apartment in Cambridge was a challenge, but I soon discovered I didn’t approve of the work climate – including homophobia – that existed at Union Carbide.”

He had met a gay man named Steve at Morrie’s, a gay bar in Ithaca. The duo took a two-week cross-country road trip to Berkeley, an excursion that would eventually result in a permanent move to the West Coast, where he worked for Viacom Cable Vision and was active in the trade union movement. With his childhood love for baseball, he also enjoyed working part-time as an usher with the San Francisco Giants.

“I had 300 of my record albums with us in the back seat of that car,” he recounts. “It was in the Haight-Ashbury District of San Francisco that my gay boyfriend, Dave – who I met at Conard House, a halfway house – introduced me to a bisexual woman, Jane, who I was also involved with for about a year. Both of them had been diagnosed as schizophrenic – and I was even labeled by one psychiatrist as an ‘affective schizophrenic’, perhaps because I took over his office to complain about how he was treating me. Unfortunately, Jane eventually killed herself and Dave died in the AIDS epidemic.”

The AIDS epidemic took a considerable toll on Mark, both personally and politically, losing many friends during the ‘80s and ‘90s, both to the disease and to suicides. Though he wasn’t Catholic, he became a member of Dignity, a support group for gay Catholics, where he met many of his closest friends.

Meanwhile, his political activities had increased. He became actively involved in the Salvadorian FMLN (Farabundo Martí National Liberation Front) and the farm labor movement in Mexico, including attending various “Encuentro” meetings in Tijuana, as well as FHAR, Farabundo Revolutionary Homosexual Action. He became involved in the local anti-nuclear movement, spending four days in Santa Rita jail after taking part in Livermore Action Group demonstrations. He ran for local offices in Berkeley, joining sometime-lover, David Lamble, as a part of the Fruit Punch Collective at KPFA in Berkeley. He worked with and photographed such controversial activists as Daniel Berrigan, Daniel and Patricia Ellsberg and the Ash Wednesday 13 at Berkeley’s Graduate Theological Union.
“I was very moved by the violent deaths of both Matthew Shepard and Gwen Araujo,” he recalls, “after having lost Harvey Milk two decades earlier. I felt I needed to be part of a supportive group in order to cope with those losses – as well as the AIDS epidemic – all assaults on my community.”

During the first decade of the 21st century, he spiraled in and out of anger and depression. Though he was actively involved in Occupy Oakland-Berkeley-San Francisco for several months beginning in October 2011, his life took a dramatic turn downward, after a tragic accident in October 2013, from which he has never fully recovered, emotionally or physically.

“I was pushing a cart of books over the Gilman Street Union Pacific crossing when I lost my balance and was hit by a train,” Mark recalls with horror. “I felt like I was sucked under that train. I lost my leg in that accident and have never been able to get government support to use the prosthesis I was fitted for since then. Some gun-toting Union Pacific authorities – claiming to be ‘friends’ – took me into my room, itemized the money they were giving me – to make sure that I signed for the $282.80 ‘award’ I received for the damages! They wanted to make sure I wasn’t going to sue them, I guess.”

After an extensive recuperative, depressing and frustrating stay at Highland Hospital, Mark now resides at an Oakland skilled nursing facility. He has become a member of Choices in Compassion to help cope with the helplessness and hopelessness he feels at the current state of his life.

“Choices in Compassion is an organization supporting doctors who can help you commit suicide without any pain,” Mark says. “The only reason I haven’t seriously considered such a dismal ending is that I hate the idea of pain. I must admit I’ve occasionally felt suicidal since the accident. Living in a place like this is fine if you’re an active Christian. But for a gay person with a Jewish-sounding last name, it’s definitely not a great and supportive place to be. In fact, I don’t let it be known to anyone here that I’m gay or I might actually be mistreated.”

Writing poetry has provided something of an outlet for Mark in dealing with his frustration. One of his post-accident poems – written and published in 2016 – is included here:
This summer, Mark reached out to Lavender Seniors to be matched with a Friendly Visitor, hoping that having a regular LGBTQ visitor would help him adjust better to his situation. He was matched with Wayne, a gay man – also an amputee – who had one day felt a similar sense of loss and hopelessness.

“I had hoped to be able to inspire Mark to start wearing his prosthesis, begin exercising a bit and get back to the business of living an active life,” Wayne remarks. “So far, I’ve felt like something of a failure at being his friend, since I think he needs help working through deeper issues like his depression before he can accept my help.”
Mark has a few words of advice, however, for those who encounter tragedies like his along the way.

“Become part of the lavender culture and get political,” he advises. “Things won’t get better if you leave it up to everybody else. If you don’t like something that’s going on, at least write a letter to your local newspaper or the New York Times, like I used to do! Hopefully, I’ll one day be back out on the front lines, as well, a place where I’ve been happy in the past. In fact, once I’m feeling physically fit, I’d even like to start ushering for the Giants again!”

My Life As A Goddess: A Memoir Through (Un)Popular Culture

By Guy Branum

Branum gives us tales of his family and Hollywood gossip. He sees himself as a total misfit.

He was born in Yuba City, California. There was agriculture but not much else. All self-respecting males wanted to be football players and nothing else. Guy asked his family questions about the world outside but the standard reply was, "You don't need to know that". Ignorance was bliss.

Guy explored the essence of gayness and how queers related to each other. He was strongly influenced by Barbara Walters and Hugh Downs on the television program "20/20". They featured help for fat people.

Guy attended the University of California at Berkeley. He was intrigued by student government and served on several committees. He attended law school and came out of the closet. He wrote lots of material for women. In Hollywood he finally discovers his true self by writing situation comedies.

Readers need to become accustomed to his style of communicating and reaching out to his audience but it's definitely worth the trip.

CONNECTIONS

Have you moved out of the area, do you want to get in contact with other Lavender Seniors near you or someone you have lost contact with? Email us and we will try to help out. No information will be shared without your specific permission.
LAVENDER SENIORS FRIENDLY VISITOR PROGRAM HAS VOLUNTEER OPPORTUNITIES AVAILABLE.
Volunteers with the Lavender Seniors Friendly Visitor program are background checked, interviewed and trained, after which they are matched with a senior to visit regularly, usually for a couple hours each week. Visitors can share stories, chat about mutual interests and current events, and if both are willing and able, volunteers can take their seniors out for a walk in the park, a bite to eat, a cup of coffee, shopping or maybe a movie or a trip to the museum.

We ask volunteers to make a commitment of at least six months.

If you are in need of a Friendly Visitor, we can help with that too!

Please contact karen@lavenderseniors.org and we will be in touch with you soon. Thank You!

Second Saturday Rainbow Lunch
December 8, Noon-2:00 pm

Combined with 3rd Friday this month for the annual VOLUNTEER CELEBRATION. See separate article below.

Lavender Seniors Combines Second Saturday & Third Friday Lunches

Annual Volunteer Appreciation Lunch

Because December’s Third Friday is just four days before Christmas and five days before Kwaanza, the two lunches (Second Saturday Rainbow Lunch and Third Friday Lunch Bunch) will be combined (for this month only!) into the middle of Hanukkah for the annual Holiday and Volunteer Appreciation Luncheon on Saturday, 8th December, 12-2pm. The celebration will be at Harry’s Hofbrau, 14900 E. 14th, San Leandro (corner of Bancroft), as it was last year.

Lavender Seniors has reserved a more semi-private space for the gathering this year. Participants will go through the buffet line and choose from this “Senior Menu”:
SENIOR DINNERS
Choice of Hand Carved Entree Includes: Mashed Potatoes, Hot Side Order, Dinner Roll, Jell-O or Ice Cream and Beverage (Substitutions are available at an additional charge)

Active volunteers will receive their meals free, of course, being given a ticket at the door to give the cashier for payment after they’ve gone through the buffet line and chosen their meal.

For other participants, the standard price for these senior dinners (including tax) is $12.50. We are asking that those who can afford it pay $7 of that amount and Lavender Seniors will cover the rest (nobody turned away for lack of funds). To expedite that process, those attending will receive a different-colored ticket from the table at the door, then pay the cashier $7 plus their ticket, which will be used to calculate what we owe Harry’s Hofbrau at the end of the day.

In order to calculate number of participants (volunteers or regular participants), it is important that an RSVP be sent either to Info@LavenderSeniors.org or by leaving a voice-mail message at (510) 736-LGBT (5428) by Thursday, 6 December, at 5pm. Anyone bringing a friend, relative or partner should indicate the number and names of their guests – as well as if s/he is a volunteer – in their e-mailed or telephoned RSVP.

Lavender Seniors continues to have need of volunteers to serve on its Board of Directors, for its Friendly Visitors program, its support groups, its twice-monthly lunches, its monthly newsletter, its monthly LGBTQ film series, being trained to participate on speaker panels and training sessions, organizing LGBTQ theater outings, plus set-up, staffing and take-down of tables at health fairs, among other more clerical and logistical needs.

Anyone interested in becoming a Friendly Visitor Volunteer should contact Karen@LavenderSeniors.org or call her at 510-424-7240.

Those interested in doing other volunteer work with Lavender Seniors should make contact either through Info@LavenderSeniors.org or by leaving a voice-mail at (510) 736-LGBT.

Better than Chocolate
Described by the New York Times as “A Comic Rhapsody to Romantic Love” and by the San Francisco Chronicle “As Sexy as a Romantic Comedy Can Be!”,
December’s Lavender Seniors Film Series presentation is the classic “Better Than Chocolate.” The film is also described as “a sexy romp of love and lust with surprising results and strong LGBT characters”!

Maggie (Karyn Dwyer) has recently moved out on her own and has started a relationship with Kim (Christina Cox). However, Maggie’s naïve and recently-divorced mother, Lila (Wendy Crewson) and brother, Paul (Kevin Mundy), who are forced to move into her loft sublet with her, are unaware she is a lesbian. Maggie’s freedom is compromised, and she believes she must keep her blossoming affair a secret. However, the clandestine romance introduces Maggie’s family to a host of new experiences, many of which are "better than chocolate".

The cast also includes Ann-Marie MacDonald as Frances, the owner of a LGBT bookstore where Maggie works, and Peter Outerbridge as Judy, a transwoman with a crush on Frances.

A couple of interesting side notes on how times have changed since 2001, when this film was first released on DVD:

The movie poster (shown on DVD cover above), showing two women embracing and one woman's naked back, was banned by the Hong Kong Television and Entertainment Licensing Authority as it was deemed "offensive to public morality, decency and ordinary good taste." Also, an advertisement in the San Diego Union-Tribune was removed, due to the word "lesbian" being present on the movie poster.

The film will be shown at 1pm on the Third Wednesday, 19th December, in the fully-accessible Carnegie Lecture Hall at the San Leandro Public Library, 300 Estudillo. Following the showing, there will be a brief evaluation and discussion of the film.
The library – still hoping to replace its aging projection system early in the new year – has made a laptop-driven projector available and has promised to have the speaker system in place for this month’s showing, after some technical hiccups last month (requiring some patience on the part of any hearing-challenged people watching “Freeheld”).

Attendees are reminded that the theater is frequently chilly, so that a sweater or light jacket is recommended. Library staff report that temperature is controlled automatically and cannot be altered for any one room in the facility.

The library can be reached via BART (five blocks above the San Leandro station), AC-Transit (two blocks above the E. 14th and Estudillo bus-stop), Bancroft Avenue, Highways 580 or 880. Ample two- and three-hour parking is available.

No Lunch Bunch in December. Join us on December 8th for our annual Volunteer Celebration at Harry’s Hofbrau in San Leandro. (See information above)

Dear Friends,

I hope that you will be able to attend the opening reception, of this exciting exhibit. Three of my photos are in this show. If you are unable to attend the opening reception, I hope that you will stop by the gallery while the show is up it is a wonderful exhibit.

Best,

Sandy Morris
[Editor's Note: The following has been excerpted from the 14th November issue of the East Bay Citizen. If the results hold, Victor Aguilar, Jr., President of the Lavender Seniors Board of Directors and San Leandro School Board member, will have pulled off a major upset, being the only candidate in San Leandro to defeat an incumbent in the 6th November election. If Victor is declared the winner, he will be the first openly-gay City Councilperson in San Leandro history. If Mr. Thomas does not concede and calls for a recount, that request may not be granted, since there has to be a significantly-less margin of victory to warrant a recount than is presently showing. Even if the victory ultimately goes to Mr. Thomas, it is still an incredible accomplishment that an openly-gay man has mounted such a successful campaign against an incumbent! Stay tuned for the Registrar of Voters' final decision, most likely by the end of November, sometime after this newsletter has been put to bed and distributed.

Either way, congratulations, Victor!]

EASTBAYCITIZEN

JOURNAL OF EAST BAY POLITICS SINCE 2009

Steven Tavares  November 14, 2018  Election 2018, Uncategorized

Too-close-to-call all over the East Bay
San Leandro school board member Victor Aguilar, Jr., left, leads San Leandro Councilmember Lee Thomas by 262 votes, through Tuesday

Over in San Leandro, Councilmember Lee Thomas’s re-election in District 3 remains on life support. San Leandro school board member Victor Aguilar, Jr.’s lead over Thomas in the head-to-head matchup dropped slightly to 262 votes.

Aguilar, Jr. still appears to be in the driver’s seat despite consistently losing ground to Thomas since the initial vote count on Nov. 6. Aguilar has received 9,185 votes, or 50.35 percent, to Thomas’s 8,923, or 48.92 percent.

If the result holds, it would amount to a stunning upset during an election season in San Leandro where voters overwhelmingly supported the three other council incumbents on the ballot. Aguilar, Jr. would also become the first openly gay councilmember in the city’s history.

> San Leandro City Council D3
AGUILAR JR. (9,185) 50.35%
*THOMAS (8,923) 48.92%
